

Conclusions

- ① QED effects can be explored in almost critical fields of highly charged ions. The interplay between electron correlations and radiative corrections can be investigated . Fair agreement with experimental data has been achieved.
- ② There is a possible violation of fundamental symmetries in atomic systems.
- ③ The non-perturbative nature of dynamical processes can be explored in relativistic heavy-ion collisions.