Conclusions

① QED effects can be explored in almost critical fields of highly charged ions. The interplay between electron correlations and radiative corrections can be investigated .
Fair agreement with experimental data has been achieved.

② There is a possible violation of fundamental symmetries in atomic systems.

③ The non-perturbative nature of dynamical processes can be explored in relativistic heavy-ion collisions.